

Summer Is Officially Here - Is Your House Ready?

It's after June 21st, so that means that summer is officially here! With all of the fireworks and hot days ahead, it's important to make sure your property is ready for the summer weather and all of the potential problems that come with it!

Unofficially, we recommend stocking up on frozen treats for the kids and cold beverages for the adults of your household to help get you through the heat of the summer.

Officially, we know that your home's electrical use peaks in the summer. Electrical safety inspections and energy audits can help you to keep your property's electrical system healthy and reliable, all summer long.

Your Summer Prep Check List

Aside from having that fully stocked freezer and cooler, there are a few chores you should get out of the way now to make sure you can enjoy yourself this summer.

- Check Those Dryer Vents
 - Dryer vent blockages don't just mean it'll take longer for your clothes to dry. Built-up debris and compacted lint can also be a major fire hazard if not handled appropriately. Next time you're doing laundry, try the "sniff test" - If it doesn't smell like fresh laundry near your exterior dryer vent when your dryer is running, it's time to check for blockages!
- Get Your Outdoor Living Spaces In Order
 - That porch or patio may have seen better days after being exposed to the elements 24/7. Clean up or upgrade your outdoor furniture to make your outdoor living spaces fresh and clean again.
- Inspections & Surge Protection To Keep Your Property Safe This Summer
 - We all love to enjoy the outdoors during the summer, but you want to make sure you've got a nice, place inside to escape to as well! Ensuring the right surge protection to keep your electrical system safe during storms and sharp increases in energy consumption means you'll greatly reduce your chances for outages and protect your appliances.
